Scaffolding and Supporting Students

Vicki Fisher, Camilla Goodman, Jean Hatton, Lehan Medlock, Jane Mullen and Kirsty Rowan
Starting Point

‘Young People have a strong impetus to connect and socialise with their peers online’ (Thomas, 2011:10)

• Promote autonomy and collaboration

• Privacy settings and challenges.
• Using social networking sites professionally.
• Isolated on placement: mentoring support.
• Building virtual communities.

Inspiring tomorrow’s professionals
Methodology

- Setting up of Facebook pages 2 professionally endorsed undergraduate courses
- Professional use and safeguarding
- Childhood Studies student led Facebook page
- Questionnaires and evaluation
- Listening to students’ voices
Questioning Community

‘You don’t build a community by building one’ Valerie Hey (SRHE, Feb 2012)

• Are these 3 Facebook (FB) pages real communities?
• Who should build a FB community?
• Whose needs are these pages satisfying?
• What size is an effective FB community?
• Are we enforcing sociability spaces on students?
• Lave and Wenger (1991:94) questioned the control of the learning community and ‘legitimate peripheral participation in communities of practice’. Is using Facebook inclusive? What about the ‘lurkers’ and the non users?
YOUTH AND COMMUNITY WORK

Camilla Goodman ok thanks x.
Broke the ice first day of Uni
30+ students met outside to go to first class.

95% of people who took part in our survey would like Facebook to continue

Childhood Studies Year One
Early Primary

Student feedback

- 47% of 1st years posted on the site but most of the remaining 53% gained help from reading other posts.
- 100% comments very positive about staff presence on site.
- 100% want SOS to continue and still have mentors from 3rd years

3rd years still need help too!

'We must stay in touch when we are at placement - it can be so lonely!!'

Reflections:
‘You don’t build a community by building one’

• Are these FB pages real communities?
• Who should build a FB community?
• Whose needs are these pages satisfying?
• What size is an effective FB community of practice?
• Are we enforcing sociability spaces on students?
• Lave and Wenger (1991:94) questioned the control of the learning community and ‘legitimate peripheral participation in communities of practice’. Is Facebook inclusive? What about the ‘lurkers’ and the non users?
Our thoughts and questions

• Only 2% of youth work students said that they would use the FB page cf 85% said that they would use face to face contact to discuss an issue with peers.

• Should virtual mentoring for placement students be further developed?

• Does virtual mentoring need tutor presence?

• If no tutor presence on FB page does this become ‘the blind leading the blind’?

• Student only page and professionalism?

• Ecclestone & Hayes (2009) critique of the ‘cotton wool approach’ - therapeutic education that is not needed and doesn’t benefit students in the long run
