Learning about yourself in the band rehearsal

Pedagogical Research

Overview
Pedagogical research in popular music

Focus
How might peer assessment and learning activities help to improve our personal attributes as they are displayed in band rehearsing?
How can we develop an improved awareness of our personal attributes and those of others in rehearsing?

Methodology
Action research conducted during 2001-2007
It involved 170 undergraduate popular music students and 80 bands
Informed by social constructivist thought
Extensive peer marking data
Sixteen in-depth individual interviews

Personal attributes

What might be the nature of our personal attributes as they are displayed in rehearsing?
Attributes that the band feel are important to them?
Attributes that are important to each band member?
Our personal 'strengths' in the rehearsal?
Our personal 'weaknesses' in the rehearsal?

Peer assessment of 'personal weaknesses'

Interviews

Grounded theory analysis produced four substantive categories

Feedback...

"an exceptional way of getting feedback" - EJ
"it enables you to understand how to improve" - HA
"it teaches you to try harder, do better" - OD, ML, US
"hard to work with people who cannot accept criticism" - JF
"my [self-selected] weaknesses – they’re not what the other people would perceive as my weaknesses" - SA

"It made me look a lot more at myself, and looking at their confidence like, with mine" - YL

Self knowledge...

"I’ve always been the one to kind of take a back seat and kind of just sit there and do whatever I’m told to do. If you know what I mean. So, because they put me in the position of deciding this, that and other, I’ve learnt to be more assertive" - DS

"It made me look a lot more at myself, and looking at their confidence like, with mine" - YL

"You definitely notice people who are confident... put their ideas forward more than people who tend to maybe not have had as much experience of playing with people" - TP

Honesty...

"There are difficulties in telling the truth face to face, so written feedback is good" - SA, DS
"written feedback avoids confrontations" - HA, SA
"It’s much assessing our friends" - OD
"I try to be honest with my friends" - HA, MR
"some give friends better marks... I’m more critical with strangers" - OD
"personal feelings get in the way sometimes, and people will purposely mark low out of spite" - JF
