ENGAGING WITH CLINICAL SUPERVISION IN A COMMUNITY MIDWIFERY SETTING

AN ACTION RESEARCH STUDY

ABSTRACT

The main aim of this research study was to explore midwives’ views and experiences of their support needs in clinical practice and then to identify how they would wish to receive such support. There was much literature to support the existence of stress and burnout in midwifery but no research that addressed ways of alleviating this. Further aims were to redress that imbalance by planning and facilitating a model of clinical supervision devised by the participating midwives.

The study took an action research approach that involved working with a group of eight National Health Service (NHS) community midwives in a collaborative, non-hierarchical and democratic way in order to achieve change. This accorded with a woman-centred approach to working with clients that was being encouraged within midwifery. The midwives were typical of many community-based midwives in the United Kingdom (UK) who were working in increasingly stressful, complex and changing environments.

Wider organisational and cultural issues are considered that affect working relationships. The nature of the way the midwives worked when they were offered and received support, and how they reacted and coped when their work team and work situation was threatened, was also explored.

Each midwife was interviewed twice; before and after the experience of clinical supervision. They also participated in two focus groups before clinical supervision. In-depth individual interviews lasted up to two hours, as did the focus groups. The interviews and the focus groups were taped, transcribed and then analysed using a relational voice-centred methodology.

The main findings were that recent and ongoing change plus the organisational demands placed on the midwives by the NHS and their managers were detrimental to working relationships with their colleagues and clients. This also inhibited the process of change. A discourse of denigration became apparent within the interviews and the midwives behaviour and coping strategies revealed some well developed defence mechanisms, as well as an apparent lack of understanding on their part and that of their midwifery managers in relation to emotion work. Resistance to change was a key defence mechanism used by the midwives.

Strong messages emerge about certain ‘performances’ being available to midwives and the use of defence mechanisms as a way of ‘getting the work done’. There are also messages about the cultural legacy of midwifery and how this can inhibit autonomous behaviour by midwives. Developing and increasing self awareness is still not viewed as being intrinsic to the work of the midwife and midwives are being asked to undertake a level of work that they have not been adequately prepared for. Neither do there appear to be effective role models for midwives. The bureaucratic pressures of working in a large maternity unit are also addressed where the system is seen as more important than the midwives.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are many, many people who have unknowingly contributed to the successful completion of this study. I sincerely thank them all, but in particular I would like to take this opportunity to thank the following people.

My gratitude to my husband Patsy and my mother Teresa, who have provided endless support throughout the life of the study, is beyond words. They have been a tower of strength and encouragement for me as have my children, Nick, Laura and Emily who have ‘studied with me’. Nick became a Police Officer during the course of the study, Laura has taken her A levels and is preparing to go to University and Emily has taken her GCSEs…and they were only ‘babies’ when I started my research journey. My father Frank, who was very proud that I was studying for my doctorate died during the course of the research.

Professor Mavis Kirkham, as my research supervisor, has provided infinite support, constantly reinforcing my ability to undertake this research as well as write the thesis. She has inspired me, trusted me, been patient with me and above all, valued me and my contributions to midwifery. Her calming presence has helped me throughout this research journey.

I would like to thank Joss, Dawn, and all the midwives who participated in the study. Without their help and time this study would not have been possible. Joss and Dawn especially have helped me to think differently. I am also grateful to the midwifery managers for providing access to the participating midwives and the maternity unit.

Deborah Hughes has stayed with me every bit of the way on my research journey, reading endless drafts, often at short notice. She has listened patiently and helped to keep me grounded, as well as providing friendship and scholarly guidance for which I will always be grateful.

I also thank Christine Horrocks who joined me at the later stages of my research journey. Her encouragement, friendship and willingness to comment on drafts have been enormously helpful and motivating. She provided a certain ‘structure’ that was necessary for me at this crucial stage of my research journey.

The West Yorkshire Education and Training Consortium (now known as West Yorkshire Workforce Development Confederation) provided funding through a small grant. Without this funding the study might not have proceeded to completion. I am also grateful to the University of Huddersfield who provided funding for my studies at the University of Sheffield.

Chapter Three: CHANGE, CULTURE, ‘CARING’ AND RELATIONSHIPS

Part 1: Culture and change in the NHS

The culture of midwifery in the NHS
The context of change in the NHS
Differing approaches to change
Sowing the seeds of change
Culture as a key influence on change
Midwives as obedient technicians
Change managing midwives
Detachment as a monitoring process
‘Militating organisational imperatives’

Key points emerging

Part 2: The midwife-mother relationship

First relationship crucial to subsequent relationships
Providing a holding environment
Providing a secure base
Community-based work as a refuge
The slipperiness of care……
……makes caring complex
The balancing act….becoming emotionally involved
Staying connected despite differences
Reciprocity: mutual aims and aspirations
Mediating between ‘connectedness’ and ‘detachment’
Picking the right balance
Different levels of engagement
Women as ‘natural carers’
The sentimental order of midwifery
Midwives’ ‘composure work’ – a form of task orientated care
Identity work – attending to nurturance, growth and healing
Therapeutic midwifery: being a ‘skilled companion’
Midwives as ‘gravy’
The consequences of partnership…devolving power

Key points emerging

Chapter Four: CLINICAL SUPERVISION – A POTENTIAL SOURCE OF SUPPORT

Strengthening or policing professional practice?
Learning lessons from other professions
Social work – ‘discussing cases’ or ‘anxious caseload management’
The concept of ‘supervisor’ – confusion and ‘definition quagmire’
‘Big sister is watching you’: supervision of midwives
The two hats – contradictions in midwifery supervision
Challenging midwifery supervision
The nature and range of clinical supervision 91
‘Doing’ clinical supervision 93
  Individual supervision 94
  Group supervision 94
  Peer supervision 95

Frameworks for clinical supervision 96
The focus of clinical supervision 96
  Hunt’s three approaches to supervision 102
  Double Matrix Model 103
  Triadic model of supervision 104
  Six Category Intervention Analysis 105
  Cyclical Model of Counsellor Supervision 106
  Growth and Support Model 107
  Guided Reflection or ‘professional narcissism’ 108
  Interactive Model 109
  Nicklin’s six-stage supervision cycle 111
  Problem orientated supervision 112
A hybrid model of clinical supervision 112
Practical route to successful clinical supervision 115

Key points emerging 116

Chapter Five: ACTION RESEARCH: OPENING NEW DIALOGUES FOR ENQUIRY 118

The beginnings…action research in the making 119
Valuing process and outcomes 121
  Contextualising ‘real-world practice’ 122
Defining action research 122
The nature of reality 127
‘Learning is rooted in experience’ 129

Rejecting the search for truth 131
  Prescription and the imposition of control 132
  What about complex, messy clinical practice situations? 133

Naturalistic research: Subjectivity and shedding light on complex problems 134
  Whose knowledge…..whose practice counts? 135

Critical theory research: challenging politically constructed situations 136
  Models…approaches…typologies…traditions? 140
    Cycles and steps as repressive and mechanical 142
    Struggling in the swampy lowlands 144
Accepting certainty and valuing uncertainty 145
Feminisms and action research 150
The living theory approach 151
  Mapping imagined frameworks’ onto clinical practice 152
  Putting values “up-front” 153

Active versus passive participation 157
Chapter Six: METHODS

Placing ‘the self’ at the centre of the inquiry
Shaping the research with social, political and critical insight
A story of myself (6.12.00)
Childhood lasts a lifetime

Phase One

Gaining access
Gatekeeping access
Old habits die hard
Silencing mechanisms at play
Recruitment to the study
Excluding ‘others’ from the research

Phases One, Two and Three

Interviews as complex, social interactions
The influence of reciprocity
Listening to midwives’ voices
Listening to the voices of Susan, Sarah and Stella
Seeking spontaneous storytelling
The interviewer as a therapeutic resource
Is it necessary to draw a line in the sand?
Choosing the venue – feeling safer on your own patch
Coping with distractions and interruptions
Articulating ‘unarticulated experience’: helping each other out
The co-production of data within interviews

Phase Two

Hearing Joss’ voice
Focus groups as ‘natural social networks’
Interaction as synergism
Focus groups equate with ‘time-efficiency’
Silent voices...remaining an outsider
Focus groups as a forum for change
Facilitating focus groups
Observing interactions within focus groups

Issues of ethics and rigour
The appropriateness of reliability and validity in action research
Exercising professional imagination
Phase Three

Analysing the midwives’ accounts 206
‘Starting up terror’ – leaping into the unknown 207
The process of making sense 208
Facing myself….again 209

The principles of voice-centred relational methodology 210

First reading: focusing on the plot by losing my own plot 211
Second reading: being with midwives 212
Third reading: achieving a sense of balance in relationships 213
Fourth reading: some voices are louder than others 214
Fifth reading: expressing emotion through metaphors 215
Metaphors as a form of expression 216

Chapter Seven: PHASE ONE - PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS
THE CHALLENGE OF CHANGE:
CONFRONTING CRISIS AND PAIN 220

The roller coaster of constant change: onerous or exciting? 221
The tyranny of team midwifery: an unfair imposition. 223
Idealising past ways of working. 226
Coping with stress: feeling upright, depressed and unable to go to work. 227
Habitual ways of working…collusive interaction and refusal to talk. 232
Bad care days…no time to listen and a fear of complex situations. 234
The rudderless ship…pulling differently and needing direction! 236
Pseudo-cohesion as a mask for unsupportive behaviour. 237
Ladylike saboteurs…‘flies in the ointment’ or ‘doing good by stealth’. 238
Self denigration as a learned response and a way to discount needs. 242
‘Shared’ or ‘clash’ of personal philosophies. 244
Generations of dinosaurs…the birth and death of oppressors. 245

Key points emerging 247

Chapter Eight: PHASE ONE - PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS:
MIDWIVES AS ‘EMOTIONAL LABOURERS’ 249

‘Framing’ the story…midwifery work as ‘performance’ 251
Emotional labour 254
Longer client interactions = feeling ‘psychologically drained’ 256
Burnout syndrome 256
‘Professional closeness’ or detachment 260

Relating to, and developing partnerships with women 262
‘Psyching one’s self up’ – a coping strategy 262
Self presentation; coping and performance 263
Being ‘their friend’; feeling safe and suffering pain 264
Emotional engagement: a source of energy or a stressor 266
Practical and intellectually challenging performances 268
Finite energy: running on empty 269
Down and worn out 271
Defining relationships: holding on to professional power 272
Expecting nothing other than what is received 273

The organisational demands of the maternity service 278
Protocolisation inhibiting the spontaneous performance of midwifery 278

Feeling overwhelmed by their relationships with each other 281
Unequal workloads despite being ‘all the same’ 284

Increasing workloads 285
‘The cult of busyness’…self protection or avoiding too much work 285
Differentiating between clients: rejection and acceptance 288
The need to be needed 289
Key points emerging 293

Chapter Nine: PHASE TWO - FOCUS GROUPS: CLARIFYING SUPPORT NEEDS AND PLANNING FOR CHANGE 294

Focus group one: A forum to reflect on support needs and change 294
Observing group interaction 295
Silent voices huddling together 296
Getting started…different forms of anxiety 297
Keeping ‘team spirit’ alive…despite obvious differences 300
Pussyfooting and ‘smoothing over’ as alternatives 302
Conversational rituals…trying to restore balance 303
Fear of exposing feelings…letting colleagues ‘see inside’ 304
Attempting to meet support needs 306
Taking things further…new style of clinical support! 308
Fear of a new hierarchy 310
Celebrating midwifery versus use of a ‘black book’ 311

Key points emerging from focus group one 314

Dawn’s input following the first focus group 315

Focus group two: Working towards a supportive framework 317
‘Them’ and ‘us’ – pseudo-collusion as a defence mechanism 318
‘Punching lights out’: no power, anger and dissatisfaction 319
‘Jumping on board’ or resisting collaboration and responsibility 320
Managing change…or not…through the study findings 323
Collaborating or colluding: yet another contradiction! 324
Different ways of working really means ‘double visits’ 325
The way forward for the work team 328
Even researchers get hurt…‘emotional pebbles and potholes’ 329

Key points emerging from focus group two 330
Chapter Ten: PHASE THREE - FINAL INTERVIEWS

CHALLENGES AHEAD: DEVELOPING AN AWARENESS OF REALITY

An ‘opportunity’ or a ‘different space’

Cohesiveness as a means of keeping problems hidden

‘Pseudo-cohesion’ as a means of masking unsupportive behaviour

A challenge: time for reflection and possible change

Too great a challenge: no time and no support during turbulent change.

The need to feel safe: negotiating a safe environment

‘Contract setting’: working together towards a clinical supervision framework.

Making time for clinical supervision

Buying time: money makes midwives!

Time out to talk: spending valuable time

Time as a finite commodity…it costs money!

Time as a ‘sacrifice’: encroaching on others’ time

Taking time that is needed elsewhere

Group supervision: feeling safer in numbers

Feeling valued through equality and consistency

Imposing boundaries: limiting involvement or avoiding responsibility.

Feeling elitist: better to exclude than include

The dumping ground: a place for unloading distress

Help rejecting complainers: a means of expressing resentment or a reflection of reality

Different ways of acknowledging endings

The empty chair: avoidance behaviour or a call for help

Facing the challenge: presenting clinical material of concern

Towards a new understanding

Avoidance of issues

‘Pit-head time’ – an opportunity to discuss ‘casework moments’

Key points emerging

Chapter Eleven: CONCLUDING THOUGHTS..... AND BEYOND

The rhetorical challenge of midwifery

‘Cultures of conflict’

Insights into the performance of midwifery

Performances as bound by the clock

Insights into working relationships
