

University of HUDDERSFIELD

University of Huddersfield Repository

Lever, John and Miele, Mara

Farm animal welfare discourses: responsible business practice and the role of big brands

Original Citation

Lever, John and Miele, Mara (2016) Farm animal welfare discourses: responsible business practice and the role of big brands. In: Interpretive Policy Analysis 11th International Conference:, 5th - 7th July 2016, University of Hull. (Unpublished)

This version is available at <http://eprints.hud.ac.uk/id/eprint/28999/>

The University Repository is a digital collection of the research output of the University, available on Open Access. Copyright and Moral Rights for the items on this site are retained by the individual author and/or other copyright owners. Users may access full items free of charge; copies of full text items generally can be reproduced, displayed or performed and given to third parties in any format or medium for personal research or study, educational or not-for-profit purposes without prior permission or charge, provided:

- The authors, title and full bibliographic details is credited in any copy;
- A hyperlink and/or URL is included for the original metadata page; and
- The content is not changed in any way.

For more information, including our policy and submission procedure, please contact the Repository Team at: E.mailbox@hud.ac.uk.

<http://eprints.hud.ac.uk/>

Farm animal welfare discourses: responsible business practice and the role of big brands

John Lever – University of Huddersfield
Mara Miele – Cardiff University

Interpretive Policy Analysis 11th International Conference: University of Hull, 5-7th July 2016

Abstract: As consumers have become increasingly concerned about food safety and food provenance over recent decades farm animal welfare (FAW) has emerged as a growing consumer concern. More recently, the business case for FAW has grown considerably on the back of these developments and many global food companies now address FAW in their corporate responsibility strategies. Building on recent work on the big brand takeover of sustainability, this paper examines the alignment of responsible business with the big brand takeover of FAW through eco-business practice (Dauvergne and Lister 2013).

Despite a growing corporate engagement with FAW in recent years, evidence from the Business Benchmark on Farm Animal Welfare (BBFAW) suggests that many global food companies have little or no understanding of why they engage with FAW. While some big brand companies are starting to make commitments that appear to go beyond the usual public relations “greenwashing”, we argue that this new corporate embrace of FAW is part of a big brand takeover aligned with responsible business practice at the expense of environmental sustainability concerns generated by industrial animal agriculture.