ENGAGING WITH CLINICAL SUPERVISION IN A COMMUNITY MIDWIFERY SETTING

AN ACTION RESEARCH STUDY

RUTH DEERY

A thesis presented in fulfilment of the requirements for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy

WOMEN'S INFORMED CHILDBEARING & HEALTH RESEARCH GROUP
SCHOOL OF NURSING AND MIDWIFERY

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD
UK

NOVEMBER 2003
The main aim of this research study was to explore midwives' views and experiences of their support needs in clinical practice and then to identify how they would wish to receive such support. There was much literature to support the existence of stress and burnout in midwifery but no research that addressed ways of alleviating this. Further aims were to redress that imbalance by planning and facilitating a model of clinical supervision devised by the participating midwives.

The study took an action research approach that involved working with a group of eight National Health Service (NHS) community midwives in a collaborative, non-hierarchical and democratic way in order to achieve change. This accorded with a woman-centred approach to working with clients that was being encouraged within midwifery. The midwives were typical of many community-based midwives in the United Kingdom (UK) who were working in increasingly stressful, complex and changing environments.

Wider organisational and cultural issues are considered that affect working relationships. The nature of the way the midwives worked when they were offered and received support, and how they reacted and coped when their work team and work situation was threatened, was also explored.

Each midwife was interviewed twice; before and after the experience of clinical supervision. They also participated in two focus groups before clinical supervision. In-depth individual interviews lasted up to two hours, as did the focus groups. The interviews and the focus groups were taped, transcribed and then analysed using a relational voice-centred methodology.

The main findings were that recent and ongoing change plus the organisational demands placed on the midwives by the NHS and their managers were detrimental to working relationships with their colleagues and clients. This also inhibited the process of change. A discourse of denigration became apparent within the interviews and the midwives behaviour and coping strategies revealed some well developed defence mechanisms, as well as an apparent lack of understanding on their part and that of their midwifery managers in relation to emotion work. Resistance to change was a key defence mechanism used by the midwives.

Strong messages emerge about certain ‘performances’ being available to midwives and the use of defence mechanisms as a way of ‘getting the work done’. There are also messages about the cultural legacy of midwifery and how this can inhibit autonomous behaviour by midwives. Developing and increasing self awareness is still not viewed as being intrinsic to the work of the midwife and midwives are being asked to undertake a level of work that they have not been adequately prepared for. Neither do there appear to be effective role models for midwives. The bureaucratic pressures of working in a large maternity unit are also addressed where the system is seen as more important than the midwives.
ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

There are many, many people who have unknowingly contributed to the successful completion of this study. I sincerely thank them all, but in particular I would like to take this opportunity to thank the following people.

My gratitude to my husband Patsy and my mother Teresa, who have provided endless support throughout the life of the study, is beyond words. They have been a tower of strength and encouragement for me as have my children, Nick, Laura and Emily who have ‘studied with me’. Nick became a Police Officer during the course of the study, Laura has taken her A levels and is preparing to go to University and Emily has taken her GCSEs…and they were only ‘babies’ when I started my research journey. My father Frank, who was very proud that I was studying for my doctorate died during the course of the research.

Professor Mavis Kirkham, as my research supervisor, has provided infinite support, constantly reinforcing my ability to undertake this research as well as write the thesis. She has inspired me, trusted me, been patient with me and above all, valued me and my contributions to midwifery. Her calming presence has helped me throughout this research journey.

I would like to thank Joss, Dawn, and all the midwives who participated in the study. Without their help and time this study would not have been possible. Joss and Dawn especially have helped me to think differently. I am also grateful to the midwifery managers for providing access to the participating midwives and the maternity unit.

Deborah Hughes has stayed with me every bit of the way on my research journey, reading endless drafts, often at short notice. She has listened patiently and helped to keep me grounded, as well as providing friendship and scholarly guidance for which I will always be grateful.

I also thank Christine Horrocks who joined me at the later stages of my research journey. Her encouragement, friendship and willingness to comment on drafts have been enormously helpful and motivating. She provided a certain ‘structure’ that was necessary for me at this crucial stage of my research journey.

The West Yorkshire Education and Training Consortium (now known as West Yorkshire Workforce Development Confederation) provided funding through a small grant. Without this funding the study might not have proceeded to completion. I am also grateful to the University of Huddersfield who provided funding for my studies at the University of Sheffield.

Chapter Three: CHANGE, CULTURE, ‘CARING’ AND RELATIONSHIPS

Part 1: Culture and change in the NHS

| The culture of midwifery in the NHS | 36 |
| The context of change in the NHS | 39 |
| Differing approaches to change | 41 |
| Sowing the seeds of change | 43 |
| Culture as a key influence on change | 44 |
| Midwives as obedient technicians | 45 |
| Change managing midwives | 47 |
| Detachment as a monitoring process | 49 |
| ‘Militating organisational imperatives’ | 50 |
| Key points emerging | 51 |

Part 2: The midwife-mother relationship

| First relationship crucial to subsequent relationships | 54 |
| Providing a holding environment | 55 |
| Providing a secure base | 56 |
| Community-based work as a refuge | 57 |
| The slipperiness of care…… | 58 |
| ……..makes caring complex | 59 |
| The balancing act….becoming emotionally involved | 60 |
| Staying connected despite differences | 61 |
| Reciprocity: mutual aims and aspirations | 62 |
| Mediating between ‘connectedness’ and ‘detachment’ | 64 |
| Picking the right balance | 65 |
| Different levels of engagement | 66 |
| Women as ‘natural carers’ | 69 |
| The sentimental order of midwifery | 70 |
| Midwives’ ‘composure work’ – a form of task orientated care | 72 |
| Identity work – attending to nurturance, growth and healing | 73 |
| Therapeutic midwifery: being a ‘skilled companion’ | 75 |
| Midwives as ‘gravy’ | 76 |
| The consequences of partnership…devolving power | 77 |
| Key points emerging | 79 |

Chapter Four: CLINICAL SUPERVISION – A POTENTIAL SOURCE OF SUPPORT

| Strengthening or policing professional practice? | 82 |
| Learning lessons from other professions | 83 |
| Social work – ‘discussing cases’ or ‘anxious caseload management’ | 85 |
| The concept of ‘supervisor’ – confusion and ‘definition quagmire’ | 86 |

Key points emerging 116

Chapter Five:  ACTION RESEARCH: OPENING NEW DIALOGUES FOR ENQUIRY 118

The beginnings…action research in the making 119
Valuing process and outcomes 121
  Contextualising ‘real-world practice’ 122
Defining action research 122
The nature of reality 127
‘Learning is rooted in experience’ 129

Rejecting the search for truth 131
  Prescription and the imposition of control 132
  What about complex, messy clinical practice situations? 133

Naturalistic research: Subjectivity and shedding light on complex problems 134
  Whose knowledge…..whose practice counts? 135

Critical theory research: challenging politically constructed situations 136
Models…approaches…typologies…traditions? 140
  Cycles and steps as repressive and mechanical 142
  Struggling in the swampy lowlands 144
Accepting certainty and valuing uncertainty 145

  Mapping imagined frameworks’ onto clinical practice 152
  Putting values “up-front” 153

Active versus passive participation 157
Chapter Six: METHODS

Placing ‘the self’ at the centre of the inquiry
Shaping the research with social, political and critical insight
A story of myself (6.12.00)
Childhood lasts a lifetime

Phase One
Gaining access
Gatekeeping access
Old habits die hard
Silencing mechanisms at play
Recruitment to the study
Excluding ‘others’ from the research

Phases One, Two and Three
Interviews as complex, social interactions
The influence of reciprocity
Listening to midwives’ voices
Listening to the voices of Susan, Sarah and Stella
Seeking spontaneous storytelling
The interviewer as a therapeutic resource
Is it necessary to draw a line in the sand?
Choosing the venue – feeling safer on your own patch
Coping with distractions and interruptions
Articulating ‘unarticulated experience’: helping each other out
The co-production of data within interviews

Phase Two
Hearing Joss’ voice
Focus groups as ‘natural social networks’
Interaction as synergism
Focus groups equate with ‘time-efficiency’
Silent voices…remaining an outsider
Focus groups as a forum for change
Facilitating focus groups
Observing interactions within focus groups

Issues of ethics and rigour
The appropriateness of reliability and validity in action research
Exercising professional imagination
Phase Three

Analysing the midwives’ accounts

‘Starting up terror’ – leaping into the unknown
The process of making sense
Facing myself….again

The principles of voice-centred relational methodology

First reading: focusing on the plot by losing my own plot
Second reading: being with midwives
Third reading: achieving a sense of balance in relationships
Fourth reading: some voices are louder than others
Fifth reading: expressing emotion through metaphors
Metaphors as a form of expression

Chapter Seven: PHASE ONE - PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS
THE CHALLENGE OF CHANGE: CONFRONTING CRISIS AND PAIN

The roller coaster of constant change: onerous or exciting?
The tyranny of team midwifery: an unfair imposition.
Idealising past ways of working.
Coping with stress: feeling upright, depressed and unable to go to work.
Habitual ways of working…collusive interaction and refusal to talk.
Bad care days…no time to listen and a fear of complex situations.
The rudderless ship…pulling differently and needing direction!
Pseudo-cohesion as a mask for unsupportive behaviour.
Ladylike saboteurs…‘flies in the ointment’ or ‘doing good by stealth’.
Self denigration as a learned response and a way to discount needs.
‘Shared’ or ‘clash’ of personal philosophies.
Generations of dinosaurs…the birth and death of oppressors.

Key points emerging

Chapter Eight: PHASE ONE - PRELIMINARY INTERVIEWS:
MIDWIVES AS ‘EMOTIONAL LABOURERS’

‘Framing’ the story…midwifery work as ‘performance’
Emotional labour
Longer client interactions = feeling ‘psychologically drained’
Burnout syndrome
‘Professional closeness’ or detachment

Relating to, and developing partnerships with women
‘Psyching one’s self up’ – a coping strategy
Self presentation; coping and performance
Being ‘their friend’; feeling safe and suffering pain
Emotional engagement: a source of energy or a stressor
Chapter Nine: PHASE TWO - FOCUS GROUPS: CLARIFYING SUPPORT NEEDS AND PLANNING FOR CHANGE

Focus group one: A forum to reflect on support needs and change
- Observing group interaction
- Silent voices huddling together
- Getting started...different forms of anxiety
- Keeping 'team spirit' alive...despite obvious differences
- Pussyfooting and 'smoothing over' as alternatives
- Conversational rituals...trying to restore balance
- Fear of exposing feelings...letting colleagues 'see inside'
- Attempting to meet support needs
  - Taking things further...new style of clinical support!
  - Fear of a new hierarchy
  - Celebrating midwifery versus use of a 'black book'

Key points emerging from focus group one

Dawn's input following the first focus group

Focus group two: Working towards a supportive framework
- 'Them' and 'us' – pseudo-collusion as a defence mechanism
- 'Punching lights out': no power, anger and dissatisfaction
- 'Jumping on board' or resisting collaboration and responsibility
- Managing change...or not...through the study findings
  - Collaborating or colluding: yet another contradiction!
  - Different ways of working really means 'double visits'
- The way forward for the work team
- Even researchers get hurt...‘emotional pebbles and potholes’

Key points emerging from focus group two
Chapter Ten: PHASE THREE - FINAL INTERVIEWS
CHALLENGES AHEAD: DEVELOPING AN AWARENESS OF REALITY

An ‘opportunity’ or a ‘different space’

Cohesiveness as a means of keeping problems hidden

‘Pseudo-cohesion’ as a means of masking unsupportive behaviour

A challenge: time for reflection and possible change

Too great a challenge: no time and no support during turbulent change.

The need to feel safe: negotiating a safe environment

‘Contract setting’: working together towards a clinical supervision framework.

Making time for clinical supervision

Buying time: money makes midwives!

Time out to talk: spending valuable time

Time as a finite commodity…it costs money!

Time as a ‘sacrifice’: encroaching on others’ time

Taking time that is needed elsewhere

Group supervision: feeling safer in numbers

Feeling valued through equality and consistency

Imposing boundaries: limiting involvement or avoiding responsibility.

Feeling elitist: better to exclude than include

The dumping ground: a place for unloading distress

Help rejecting complainers: a means of expressing resentment or a reflection of reality

Different ways of acknowledging endings

The empty chair: avoidance behaviour or a call for help

Facing the challenge: presenting clinical material of concern

Towards a new understanding

Avoidance of issues

‘Pit-head time’ – an opportunity to discuss ‘casework moments’

Key points emerging

Chapter Eleven: CONCLUDING THOUGHTS..... AND BEYOND

The rhetorical challenge of midwifery

‘Cultures of conflict’
