Twitter

The image shows a Twitter profile for 'hudlib' (UHuddersfieldLibrary) with a blue overlay for 'hudeprints' (Hudd Uni Repository). The profile information for 'hudlib' includes its name, location in Huddersfield, Yorkshire, and its website. The 'hudeprints' overlay shows its name, location, website, bio, and statistics: 0 following, 28 followers, and 5 listed. The main content area displays three tweets from 'hudeprints', each with a title, a URL to an eprint, and a timestamp. The first tweet is about 'Tensions and Barriers to Improving Maternity Care', the second is about 'Switching and swapping faces', and the third is about 'Exploring practice and participation in transition to postgraduate social science study'. The right sidebar shows 'Tweets' (202), 'Favorites', 'Following', and an 'RSS feed of hudeprints's tweets' link.

Once you've used information, it's important to make sure you correctly reference everything you've used. This is so everyone knows that you've haven't borrowed any of the ingredients without acknowledging them (what we call plagiarism) and that others can go back and reproduce your recipe in future. To help you do this there is a University approved handbook as well an interactive reference builder for you to use. For more help with referencing, see How does it taste?
