The Library Advisory Working Group exists to help improve communications between JISC-Collections and the academic community. Formed in December 2007 the group is comprised of some of the more vocal individuals from UK libraries, which always results in lively meetings! So far we have tackled various hot topics including Federated Access Management, the JISC national e-books observatory project and Additional Authorised User Licences. Over the last two years it has become one of “the” groups where members can become actively involved with the latest issues in e-resource management.
