Context: TQEF Project

What is Distributed Learning?

- Distributed student cohorts
- T&L dispersed across settings, time, and a variety of technologies
- Not distance learning, not traditional learning somewhere in between
- Student-centred learning environment:
  - uses flexible learning - student choice and control

Why Are We Using Distributed Learning?

Two Main Reasons

Practical

- New campuses
- Widening participation
- Small cohorts of students

Strategic

- ‘Petri dish’ approach
- Distributed cohorts force change in thinking
- Successes replicated on main campus

How Are We Using Distributed Learning?

Online activities

Video-conferencing

Case Study: Screen-casting

What Benefits Do These Strategies Bring?

What Have We Learned?

- It brings unexpected benefits
- It's actually easier than many people think
- There are obstacles to overcome
- Efficiencies of scale increase with added campuses
